Fiji is located south west of the equator and is known as the "Crossroads of the Pacific". Fiji is made up around 330 islands, only around 100 of those islands are inhabited.
Fijian people are generally nice people that believe strongly in their culture and take their religion very strongly. There are many religions in Fiji such as Christianity, Buddhism, Hinduism and Catholic. All of these religions are respected taken very seriously although there may be the occasional squabble over whose religion is right and whose religion is wrong they generally respect each other.
Fijian food is wonderful abundance of herbs and spices full of superb flavour. Fijian food has a lot of seafood and vegetables, Fijian food also involve many of Indian spices that make the food all that much better.
Our issue is on the economy of Fiji over the last decade. I will be working with Jayden Klaus, Levi glucose and Matt Rosengrave.
